

Poredbeno pomorsko pravo = Comparative Maritime Law

AIMS AND SCOPE

Poredbeno pomorsko pravo = Comparative Maritime Law (CML) is the key periodical in the field of maritime law and the law of the sea in Croatia, but also in the region.

The journal covers all topics of international, domestic and comparative maritime and shipping law, transport law and the international law of the sea.

It is focused on publishing :

- academic and professional articles,
- professional translations of the international legal instruments and documentation,
- digests of the leading domestic, foreign and international court and arbitral decisions,
- book reviews,
- reports from the relevant meetings, conferences, symposia and similar events
- cumulative index (occasionally).

All the articles are peer reviewed by the leading local and foreign experts and academics.

Peer-review policy: double-blind ; two reviewers.

Articles and abstracts are published in Croatian or English language.

The journal is open for cooperation with the academics, researchers, and professional experts from Croatia and abroad, from universities and other academic or research institutions, judicature, state administration, shipping, transport and insurance sectors.

The journal that does not charge any author fees.

CML is an open access journal.

License CC BY-ND allows for redistribution, commercial and non-commercial, as long as it is passed along unchanged and in whole, with credit to authors.

The full text materials can be downloaded and redistributed, paying due regard to attribution by giving appropriate credit to the authors and the publisher and by providing reference according to the customary rules of citation, but they cannot be modified, transformed or build upon.

The journal is published annually (printed edition; online version – portal HRCAK).